

Ingleside Welcomes New Officers to Its Board of Directors

Riegel Named Chair, Bartels Vice Chair for Washington, D.C.- Area Senior Living Provider

Washington, D.C. – Ingleside, a premier provider of comprehensive senior living services in the Washington, D.C. metropolitan area, appoints two new officers and a new member to its Board of Directors. Richard Riegel, who previously served as the Vice Chair, is the new Chair. Bruce Bartels, who served as a member of the Board, is the new Vice Chair. Dr. Hugh F. Hill is also joining the Board as a new member.

Richard (Dick) Riegel spent 30 years with the U.S. Air Force in command and senior leadership positions throughout the United States, Asia and Europe. He operated and maintained a full-service air base community for 10,000 military and family members and 200 aircrafts that provided support for airlift participating in Desert Shield/Desert Storm. Riegel later worked in private sector and government positions at Fidelity Technologies Corporation, the District of Columbia Government and the National Defense Industrial Association. He has also served in numerous leadership positions as a member of Chevy Chase Presbyterian Church. During the winter months, he works as a volunteer for the AARP Foundation to operate a local center for providing free income tax preparation and filing services to low and middle-income people.

Bruce M. Bartels has had a long and distinguished career in operational leadership of hospitals and health systems, including leadership as CEO of Wellspan, a diversified health system with 11,000 employees and $1.5B in revenue, from 1999 to 2014. Since 2014, Bartels has continued his community and health services leadership as a health consultant and as a participant in boards and commissions including the Pennsylvania Governor's Commission on Early Learning Investment, Penn-Mar Human Services (board member), Pennsylvania Partnerships for Children, WITF Enterprises (board member, chair), the York County Community Foundation (Embracing Aging Committee chair) and the American Board of Dermatology. Bartels has a Master of Business Administration from the University of Chicago and a Bachelor of Arts degree from the University of Wisconsin.

Dr. Hugh F. Hill is an accomplished physician, having practiced emergency medicine for 40 years in a variety of top-ranked hospitals and served in administrative and academic positions. He is currently an attending physician in the Department of Emergency Medicine at Johns Hopkins Bayview Hospital in Baltimore, Md. and an assistant professor of emergency medicine at the Johns Hopkins School of Medicine, where he has worked since 1996.

During Hill's tenure at Johns Hopkins, he also served as Acting Deputy Director and Acting Medical Officer for the Center for Medicare and Medicaid Services Office of Financial Management Program Integrity Group. Hill is a licensed attorney and practices part-time on a consultative basis in a variety of health law issues. He has also held a number of leadership and consulting positions for government agencies, insurance companies, and hospice and home health care organizations. Additionally, he has worked as an emergency physician at several hospitals. Hill has a Doctor of Medicine degree from the Medical College of Virginia, a Doctor of Law degree from the University of Virginia, and a bachelor of arts degree from Washington & Lee University.
